My CV may be downloaded here. This document is great for a quick flash of information, but generally a CV is a poor way of telling the real story of who I am and why I have the audacity to believe that I am qualified to teach you a thing or two. So, here it (briefly) is:

In addition to writing most of the content for The Legal Satyricon, For my "day job," I am a First Amendment attorney. While the central focus of my practice First Amendment law, I branch out into Intellectual Property, Internet, and Entertainment Law. Let's just say that I have the coolest job in the world. I am constantly working on the cutting edge of developing areas of law, and I get to fight "the good fight" – protecting all of our First Amendment freedoms. It is an immensely rewarding career choice.

I have experience in both the transactional and litigation sides of a diverse practice that involves many different types of entertainment and media law issues. My "strike zone" is the confluence of First Amendment law and intellectual property law. However, I have experience and expertise in all areas of First Amendment and entertainment law matters. I have represented adult entertainment establishments against socially conservative communities that want to drive "that type of thing" out of town, defamation defendants who have been abused by SLAPP suits, and intellectual property matters with a particular focus on fighting violations
